

Position as PhD-Researcher

We are

DERI Innsbruck is one of the leading research groups in the area of Semantic Web technologies with excellent ties to key relevant research groups worldwide. For further information regarding our research, projects and organization, please see <http://www.deri.at>.

We offer

- A stimulating environment of a leading research group in the fields of Semantic Web, Semantic Web services, formal languages and reasoning
- Excellent ties to research groups worldwide
- Up-to-date infrastructure and resources, including funding for attending international conferences, PhD symposia, summer schools, etc.
- Standardized international exchange programs such as BIT and EastWeb
- Opportunity to work in nationally funded integrated research projects
- Opportunity to take part in FP7 1st Call international research projects focusing on topics such as Web 2.0, service-oriented computing, formal languages and reasoning, ontologies and ontology engineering
- Opportunity to work with internationally established academic and industrial partners
- Multicultural working place with modern infrastructure and facilities

We expect

- A strong background in Computer Science or related disciplines
- Willingness to work in an international environment
- The ability to take part in large-scale international research projects
- Willingness to combine formal scientific work with application-oriented research in order to solve real-world problems
- Research interest and expertise in at least one of the areas: Formal languages and reasoning (Description Logics, Logic Programming), ontology languages, Semantic Web services, ontologies, business aspects of semantic systems.

We kindly invite you to submit your application to hr.at@deri.org. Please include a current resume, a list of publications (if applicable), and digital versions of your most relevant works (e.g. graduation thesis).